

Interactions between commercial fishing and seabirds: Relevant Government frameworks

Fisheries New Zealand and the Department of Conservation are the regulatory agencies responsible for managing interactions between seabirds and commercial fishing activities. However, a multi-faceted operational environment supports the implementation of marine mammal management measures in New Zealand. This results in a complex network of activities.

